Dear Mr.

Mr. Bush has asked me to respond to your letter of 23 April, in which you told him of your intentions to pursue a course of study in Sino-American relations.

Our China specialists advise that several schools offer excellent programs in China studies. They know of the programs largely by reading the published work of the faculty members who supervise the programs, and by the quality of the scholars that they produce--many of whom come to work here or at the State Department. If you contact the schools, they can give you more specific details.

In your own part of the country you might check with the Center for Chinese Studies at the University of California (Berkeley) or the Stanford University U.S.-China Relations Program. The University of Washington has a Far Eastern and Russian Institute.

If you are inclined to go east to study, you might try the Harvard University East Asian Research Center, the Columbia University East Asian Institute, the University of Michigan Center for Chinese Studies, or the University of Chicago Department of Political Science.

These are not the only places to study. Other major schools in the country have good faculties and programs. We hope this kind of guidance is helpful.

Sincerely,

B. C. Evans, Jr.

Dear Mr. Bush,

I am very much interested in advice concerning what schools and courses I should attend in order to obtain a good foundation in working with Sino-American relations. I've written to China Travel Service in Peking both in appreciation for their hospitality and to inquire about returning there to study. However, I've received no response.

You mentioned that if I would like, you could ask experts to advise me about graduate courses which would be useful in this field. If it is not too much trouble, I'll take you up on it.

I have no problem with the draft letter for Mr. [redacted] but it would be my advice that the Director not get directly involved in this one and therefore not sign the letter going back to [redacted] unless he has strong personal reasons for doing so. Who knows what [redacted] might do in future possibly at some institution we recommended. I acknowledge that he may be in good shape now but this is no assurance against a future outbreak. In my Consular days we would start off a letter for the Chief by saying "Mr. Bush has asked me to answer your letter, etc., etc., etc." If you wish, I could sign it but you may have other people you would prefer to use for this.

Ben: This is a kid that went to Chian on a tour- had a breakdown, threatened to kill Mao, was kicked out of China
etc. but now seems to be doing O.K.
He should get a thoughtful reply- good therapy for him...Shouldn't  have the action on this????
